Information for employers

The Recognised Seasonal Employer (RSE) Scheme is intended to help the horticulture and viticulture industries to plan for, and meet, their seasonal labour requirements at times where labour demand exceeds the available New Zealand workforce.

The term 'overseas worker' is used throughout this form. This term has the same meaning as 'non-New Zealand citizen or residence class visa holder worker' as used in RSE Instructions.

Eligible seasonal workers

Employers who have gained RSE status can apply for an Agreement to Recruit (ATR). An ATR allows employers to recruit a set number of workers who are not New Zealand citizens or residence class visa holders, to plant, maintain, harvest, and pack crops in the horticulture and viticulture industries. An ATR may be granted where the Ministry of Social Development confirms there are not enough New Zealand citizens or residence class visa holders available and willing to fill the employer's seasonal labour requirements.

What is an RSE?

An RSE is a New Zealand employer who has had an application for recognition as an RSE approved by Immigration New Zealand (INZ). RSE status is only granted where an employer meets specified standards, particularly in regard to recruitment and employment practice, and has satisfied INZ that they will continue to meet these standards throughout their period as an RSE.

To gain recognition as an RSE an employer must, among other things, be financially viable, comply with relevant New Zealand Instructions and legislation, and have good employment practices.

RSE status will be granted for two years for successful first-time applicants. Prior to RSE status expiring, employers are required to re-apply for RSE status if they wish to apply to recruit more overseas workers.

Obtaining RSE status is step one in a four-step process to employ overseas seasonal labour in the horticulture and viticulture industries.

Applications for RSE status

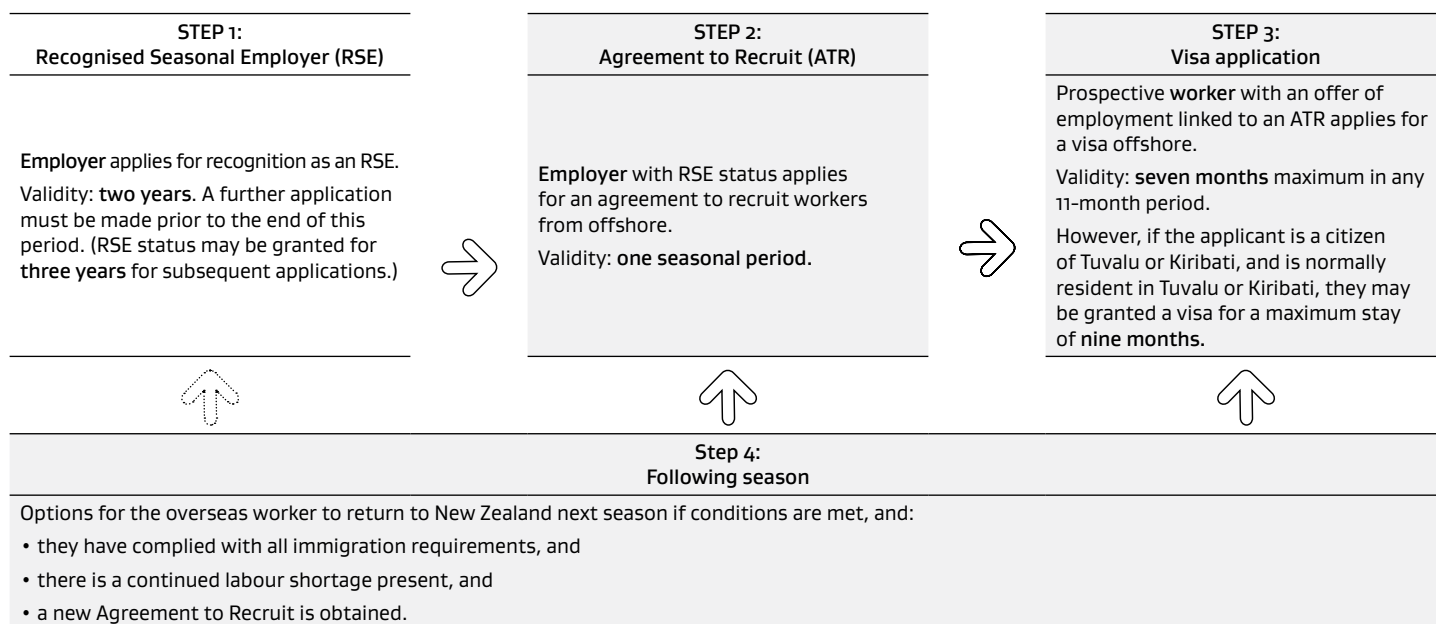

Applications for RSE status must be made on this form and must be accompanied by any documents which are required to support the application and the required fee. See our Fees Guide (INZ 1028) for more details.

RSE Instructions process

RSE requirements

To be granted RSE status, applicants must demonstrate that they:

- are a New Zealand employer (as defined in RSE Instructions), and
- are in a sound financial position, and
- have human resource policies and practices that are of a high standard, promote the welfare of employees, and include a dispute resolution process, and
- have shown a commitment to training New Zealanders, and to recruiting New Zealanders, and
- have good workplace practices, including a history of compliance with all immigration and employment laws such as the Immigration Act, the Injury Prevention, Rehabilitation, and Compensation Act, the Minimum Wage Act, the Health and Safety at Work Act, the Employment Relations Act, the Holidays Act, and the Wages Protection Act.
- are able to meet the further requirements set out below.

Applicants must consent to INZ seeking information from other services of the Ministry of Business, Innovation & Employment, the Ministry of Social Development, Inland Revenue, the Accident Compensation Corporation and any relevant unions, agencies, and industry bodies concerning the applicant's compliance with New Zealand employment, health and safety, and immigration laws.

Where such consent is not given, an application for RSE status may be declined.

INZ must be satisfied that employers will:

- take all reasonable steps to recruit and train New Zealanders for available positions before seeking to recruit workers who are not New Zealand citizens or residence class visa holders, and
- not use a recruitment agent who seeks a commission from workers in exchange for securing an employment agreement, to recruit overseas workers, and
- pay for half the return airfare between New Zealand and the worker's country of residence for each worker recruited under RSE Instructions (or half the return airfare between New Zealand and Nadi, Fiji, for workers from Kiribati and Tuvalu), and
- comply with the requirements for employment agreements including the minimum remuneration, sick leave and pay deduction requirements as set out in RSE Instructions, and
- make available appropriate pastoral care (including food, shelter, clothing, and access to health services and suitable accommodation) to their overseas workers at a reasonable cost during the period of employment, and
- promptly notify INZ if any overseas workers breach the conditions of their visa, and
- promptly notify INZ of any disputes with holders of RSE limited visas that have resulted in the suspension or dismissal of the worker, and
- not engage the services of a contractor who does not have good workplace practices and who employs overseas workers, and

- have direct responsibility for the daily work output and supervision of overseas workers recruited under these Instructions (unless the exception to this requirement described below applies), and
- pay to MBIE any costs reasonably incurred by MBIE, to a maximum of NZ$3000 per worker, in relation to the repatriation (including any maintenance and accommodation) of any overseas worker who requires repatriation as a result of a breach of the terms and conditions of their RSE limited visa, and
- disclose, on request, to representatives of MBIE all payments received from RSE workers (including payments for airfares, accommodation and other pastoral care)
- take all reasonable steps to find full time work for the duration of an RSE worker’s visa, including by finding work opportunities with other RSE employers if necessary.
- ensure that employees involved in the recruitment or management of RSE workers complete all the Employment New Zealand employer e-modules at least once during each RSE status period and are able to provide evidence (upon INZ’s request) confirming their employees’ completion of the e-modules.

Under RSE Instructions, INZ is required to be satisfied that all of the information and documents included in an application for RSE status are genuine and accurate, and may take any steps it considers necessary to verify such information or documents, including interviews. INZ may also, where necessary, conduct a site visit of an employer’s premises. Where any information is identified by the employer as commercially sensitive, is provided to INZ in confidence, and INZ considers the disclosure of that information is necessary for the determination of the application, INZ will seek the consent of the employer for the disclosure of that information.

Note: for the purposes of these Instructions, the return airfare is defined as the total cost of travel from the worker’s country of residence (or from Nadi (Fiji) for a worker who is a citizen of Tuvalu or Kiribati) to New Zealand and back, including all associated taxes and fees.

Direct responsibility and supervision exception

An RSE does not have to be directly responsible for the daily work output and supervision of overseas workers when the workers are temporarily working on the worksite or worksites of another RSE who has agreed to take on these responsibilities. We call this second RSE the recipient RSE. The RSE who employed the workers under RSE Instructions (the first RSE) remains accountable for all other responsibilities under RSE Instructions. We only allow this arrangement if:

- the total period of work on the recipient RSE’s worksite/worksites is of one month or less;
- the recipient RSE’s worksite/worksites is within the region specified in the first RSE’s ATR; or
- the worksite or worksites of the recipient RSE is within another region where the workers are temporarily relocating for the purposes of repatriation; and
- the first RSE has notified INZ in advance of the arrangement.

Agreement to Recruit

If the business is granted RSE status, the employer may then apply for an ATR before recruiting overseas workers. To apply for an ATR, a completed Application for an Agreement to Recruit under the Recognised Seasonal Employer Instructions (INZ 1141) must be submitted to INZ, including the required supporting evidence. If an ATR is granted, it will allow an employer to recruit a specified number of overseas workers to work in specific jobs with the RSE.

Who is eligible to work for an RSE?

An RSE that has been granted an ATR may make an offer of employment to workers from the Pacific nations listed below (within the conditions of the ATR). Workers from these nations who are 18 or over may be granted a limited visa if they hold an acceptable job offer, hold a return ticket to their home country, meet health and character requirements, and meet the requirements for a bona fide applicant.

RSE Instructions Pacific Nations
Federated States of Micronesia	Palau	Solomon Islands
Fiji	Papua New Guinea	Tonga
Kiribati	Republic of Marshall Islands	Tuvalu
Nauru	Samoa	Vanuatu

In circumstances where an RSE cannot recruit overseas workers from the list of nations listed in the table above, they may be granted an agreement to recruit overseas workers from other nations if the RSE:

- was unsuccessful in recruitment after reasonable attempts to recruit from the nations listed above, or
- has pre-established employment relationships with workers of other nationalities, or
- can provide reasonable grounds why it is not feasible to recruit from the Pacific nations listed above.

When assessing whether an RSE has made reasonable attempts to recruit from the eligible Pacific nations, INZ will require evidence that attempts to recruit have been made, such as a written communication from a national RSE officer stating that they have been consulted and agree that employing workers from the Pacific nations is not feasible in the circumstances.

INZ will assess whether a business has a pre-established employment relationship. Such factors considered are the number of workers employed from each country relative to the total number of workers, the number of previous occasions on which workers have been recruited from these countries, the length of time for which these workers were employed, and whether the RSE has made a substantial investment in establishing formal training opportunities or recruitment processes with workers or communities within these countries.

Any ATR application to recruit outside the Pacific nations listed above must be accompanied by a written request stating the country/countries that the RSE wants to recruit from and supporting evidence documenting why they have not been able to recruit workers from the Pacific.

RSE status may be declined or rescinded

An application for RSE status will be declined if an employer does not meet the criteria for RSE status, or if INZ considers that giving the employer RSE status would create unacceptable risks to the integrity of New Zealand's immigration or employment laws or policies.

RSE status may be rescinded if there is any breach of RSE or ATR requirements, or commitments made by the RSE employer in an undertaking to INZ in relations to the approved class of worker border exceptions, other than of a minor nature, or if INZ considers an employer's conduct has created an unacceptable risk to the integrity of New Zealand's immigration or employment laws or policies, or if the employer has breached the obligations of any undertaking made to INZ, other than of a minor nature, as part of enabling an RSE limited visa holder to benefit from a special direction. Where an employer's RSE status has been rescinded, INZ will not approve any further applications for RSE status from the employer that are made within one year from the date their RSE status was rescinded.

Applications for reconsideration

There is no statutory right of appeal against a decision by INZ to decline an application for RSE status; however, INZ will reconsider a decision to decline RSE status if the employer provides new information and does so promptly. Any application for reconsideration must be made in writing. INZ's decision on a reconsideration assessment is final.
